A Sepia Sketch

"Good night, Harry!" Miss Eastwick's coat fell on to the floor, and, bending forward in her shimmering satin gown, she kissed the pictured face before her.

It was a ceremony gone through every night, as it had been for the last ten years. In the early days, with silent tears, in a lavender scented attic, now electric light was switched on in the big studio in Washington, where Harry Lawton's picture hung in its silver frame to inspire the pastels and dainty miniatures which had brought Isobel Eastwick fame.

Ten years ago young Lawton had sailed for South America, vowing as soon as he had a home to offer her to return and claim Isobel's promise to wait for him.

Miss Eastwick was nothing if not constant—nothing if not fanciful, her friends said, though they did not guess at the romance of her life, and she had cherished the memory of those promises and the hope that one day her lover would return.

Paul Maitland was one of the few people who knew the whole story, and in spite of that he had asked her to marry him.

The question had grieved Miss Eastwick's soul. It seemed to be a reflection on her constancy, and she was not a little afraid that this unexpected development might end their friendship.

But he had spoken strongly, a great deal too strongly, on the subject of wasted affections, pink and white boys, etc.—he who was really impossibly ugly. And yet—

As though to convince herself of his impossibility Miss Eastwick picked up a sepia sketch of a man's head—it was an ugly face, with the determined jaw and deep set eyes—and laid it for a moment beside the water color in its dainty silver frame. She laughed. The contrast was too funny!

Miss Eastwick stood painting in her studio before an easel, making the most of the early spring sunshine. The many successful portraits of last year's exhibitions had brought her more work than she could do, and she rose early and labored hard for love of her art.

Paul Maitland had sometimes brought his fiddle and played to her in the afternoons when her visitors had departed, but today he had not come, and she missed his dark, ugly face, his deep, refined voice expressing her own half formed, wholly inexpressible thoughts.

Ah! There was a knock. It must be he! He would not stay away simply because she could not marry him. A faint, becoming blush rose to her cheek. Yes, it was a man's tread coming upstairs, but not Maitland's surely! This was heavier, and this red faced, red bearded man, with meaningless light eyes! Who could he be? Who? And then in a moment she knew.

"Harry!"
"My gracious! What elegant quarters! Belle, you are a peach!" A twang that might have been cut with a knife!

Miss Eastwick was speechless. She glanced from the uncompromising figure on the hearth rug to the water color on the wall, and only a sickening dread that he had come to claim her promise kept her from bursting into uncontrollable laughter at the shattering of her idol.

"I've times and times seen your name in the illustrated papers we've had in Lima," he was saying, "painting daughters and wives of millionaires, duchesses and lords and even a royal princess. Haven't the boys stared when I've told them how you and I were going to be married when my ship came in!"

"You spoke of me like that!" Miss Eastwick thought. "And it was for you that I sent away Paul! And I thought it mattered what a man looked like!"

"You're an elegant little woman enough," Mr. Lawton continued descending. "Eliza, now, is a different build of a woman. Would make three of you?"

"Who could Eliza be?"
"She was a bit jealous of you, I can say. I've often laid it on how pretty and dainty you were to rile her, but I'd always bring her around by telling how, if I married you, I'd have been sitting on spindle legs each twaddling 'In Memoriam' or some such trifle, and Eliza'd be mightily pleased with herself."

A great content had come upon Miss Eastwick.
"Eliza is your wife. Is she not with you?"

"You bet! Eliza wouldn't give up the chance of seeing Washington and the states in a hurry."

"Why did you not bring her with you?" said Isobel. "I should have been delighted to see her."
"Tell you the truth, Belle, I didn't quite know how you'd take my arrange. Of course I knew there was a sort of promise between us, but nothing in writing, mind you. Being an old maid and that, I thought you might cut up rough."

"On the contrary," said Miss Eastwick cheerfully, "it would have been quite absurd for you to have done otherwise. Must you go already?"

The door shut behind him. She crossed the room, took down the sepia sketch and once more laid it beside the Harry of long ago. She tried to laugh—a pitiful little laugh, which ended in a sob.

Then with feverish haste the silver frame was unfasted, the paper at the back torn off, and with the aid of a pair of scissors Isobel removed the tiny headless nails and piece of board. The sketch followed, was crumpled in ruthless hands and flung far from her. She dusted the glass carefully with her handkerchief and with the lightest, tenderest touch fitted another scrap of rough drawing paper into the vacant place—a man's head in sepia, with deep set eyes and an ugly, square jaw.

Miss Eastwick was too busy hammering in the nails again to hear this time a step on the stairs. It was only when the door opened and a man's voice spoke that she started guiltily, clasping the silver frame close to her that its contents might not be seen.

"I have come to get my violin before I go away," Paul Maitland said quietly.

He had come to get the fiddle—yes, and also with the hope that Isobel might have changed her mind last night—might have found that she cared more for the present friend than for that pink and white boy. He found her instead with the boy's picture clasped to her breast.

"Your violin? Oh, yes," Miss Eastwick said nervously, pointing to a faraway corner of the studio. "No, no—there, not here!"

A shadow crossed the dark, ugly face.

"Thank you," he said. "You need not fear that I shall touch the picture or come near you."

Isobel watched him with fascinated eyes. In five minutes—in four—three—in one minute—it would be too late. Oh, why could she not speak—show him—tell him?

The man fastened the violin case mechanically, replaced some magazines he had disarranged, picked up a crumpled piece of paper which lay at his feet, smoothed it out and laid it on the table.

"Good heavens! Isobel, what does this mean?"

He held it out to her, crumpled and torn, the pictured face from the silver frame.

"Isobel"—the tenderness of his voice was irresistible—"what have you put in that frame?"

He gently loosened the slender fingers and took her treasure from her, seeing at last what she had sought to hide.

"What does this mean, Isobel?" he repeated.

"It means—it means—oh, Paul, it means that I missed you, and then Harry came and didn't want me! And, oh, if you could have seen him! She broke off, laughing hysterically.

"Lawton came here, Isobel? Not that brute I saw getting into a carriage outside with a woman dressed in every color of the rainbow?"

"Was she there? Yes, that was the man. Directly he went," she added slowly, "I took down the frame and put you there instead—and into my heart, too—for always."
—Chicago Tribune.

The Way He Said It.
The young wife was weeping bitterly.

Her mother softly stole in and put her arms about her.

"What's the matter, Dolly?" she asked.

"Oh, I am so miserable!" she wailed.

"For what reason, dear?"

"I—I—I asked Tootsey this m-m-morning if he w-w-would marry again if I d-d-died, and he—"

"What! Did the brute tell you he would?"

"N-n-no. That what's the matter. He j-just looked at me as if I had accused him of b-being crazy and said, 'Well, I should rather think not.' And oh, mother, it was the way he said it!"—Kansas City Independent.

CONDENSED STORIES.

Why Alexander Swallowed His Drink In One Gulp.

H. E. Buermeyer, the president of the Amateur Skating association, was talking about the caution that is needed in the practice of figure skating.

"One must be very cautious," said Mr. Buermeyer, "for there are points in certain fancy figures where a fall might mean a fractured skull or a broken arm. At the same time, though, one does not need to carry caution to extremes. One does not need to act like the old Bostonian in the tavern.

"This Bostonian sat one evening in a tavern drinking beer with three companions of his own age. The others drank their beer slowly—a sip or two every five minutes. But the old Bostonian, the moment a full glass was set before him, drained it down in a jiffy.

"The friend on his right noticed his queer conduct.

"I say, Alexander," he said, 'why do you always swallow your drink in one mouthful?"

"Once," the other answered, 'I had my glass knocked over.'"

Starting the Asylum.
A very zealous clergyman in one of the far western states conceived the idea of instituting a founding asylum in the city in which he was laboring. He found an urgent need for an institution of this kind and then set about to discover the means for realizing his ideal home for helpless offspring. A meeting of the congregation was called and the needs of such a place set forth in eloquent language.

The congregation listened in silence and did not seem responsive. The clergyman became more fervid than ever and then pointed out the necessity of furnishing the means for starting the institution. Still there was no response, and then the preacher determined to go straight to the point. So, selecting a particular parishioner, who was wealthy and who happened to be a widower, he exclaimed:

"Brother Jones, what will you contribute toward starting this orphan asylum?"

Brother Jones seemed dazed for a moment at this unexpected thrust and then, struggling to his feet, said magnanimously:

"I'll give two boys and a girl!"
—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Whistler's Airy Wit.
In Whistler's student days he was on one occasion dining with a group of friends in a Paris restaurant. The attention of the young men was presently directed toward an English family near them, of whom the father was endeavoring in execrable French to plan a dinner. Learning forward, Whistler, in his most charming manner, inquired if he could be of aid. The stranger drew himself up with a manner of offense and haughtily replied, "I assure you, sir, I can give my order without assistance."

"Can you, indeed?" quoth Whistler airily. "I fancied the contrary just now when I heard you desire the waiter to bring you a pair of stairs."—Lippincott's.

A Regular Sea Dog.
When Abe Gruber was up in the Adirondacks last summer he was compelled to put up for a few days at a boarding house. He was relating his experience there the other night.

"The landlady was what I call a pirate," he said.

"Why, how much did she rob you of, Mr. Gruber?" asked one of his auditors.

"Oh, it wasn't so much that," replied Mr. Gruber, "which makes me designate her thus. It was the way in which she repelled boarders."—New York Times.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

How Hank Sullivan Put a Faro Bank Out of Business.

"I used to hate a quarrelsome man like pizen," said Hank Sullivan, one of the leading terrors of Red Gulch, to a select crowd in "Wicked Mike" Hogan's saloon, "but I don't do it no more. One o' thet kind saved me from losin' all the dust I'd dug in three years, an' I kain't never forget it. How'd it happen? This way: I wuz down to the Silver King in Denver playin' faro bank to beat the band. I'd been back in the mountains fer nigh on to three years an' was full o' gold dust an' the desire for excitement. Bill Jennings, the quarrelsomest man I ever see, was with me. Well, luck wuz against me, an' pretty soon I see myself down to the cloth. Seven thousand dollars of good, hard yellow gold dust gone across the table to the house! As the last chip I had on earth was raked in I had a hunch to play the ace open. I knew it would come. I felt it wuz a certainty, but my money was out. I wuz about to rise an' go out an' blow my head off or somethin' o' thet sort when I happened to glance at Bill Jennings. The look saved me. Bill was always carryin' a 'chip on his shoulder' fer somebody. I took thet chip an' put it on the ace. It won, an' from that minute luck turned my way. In a week's play I had the faro bank dealer sellin' wienervurst on a corner. Cleaned him clear out! An' that's why I've sorter got a weakness for a quarrelsome man."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

BIRD FLIGHT.
Marvelous Power and Endurance of the Frigate Bird.

When the marvelous problem of bird flight has been solved man will be able to navigate the air with ease and safety, but it is doubtful if he will be before that period. The writer has watched the frigate bird keep alongside a steamer going at the rate of fifteen miles an hour for days in the Pacific ocean. Occasionally when some morsel of food was dropped from the vessel the bird would sink into the water and devour it, only to overtake the steamer in an instant with the greatest ease and then again sail for hours alongside the vessel, neither raising nor closing its extended wings.

Going against the wind, a piece of paper thrown overboard would fly backward like a shot, but the bird moved constantly forward against the wind without the slightest apparent effort. At night, of course, it would sink into the water for rest and sleep, and by morning the steamer would be perhaps a hundred miles ahead. But the bird would soon overtake it and continue its close companionship the following day. It may be claimed that it was not the same bird that thus accompanied the vessel day after day, but in the case cited there was a marked peculiarity about the bird's wing that easily distinguished it from the others.

Whence comes this marvelous moving power? No man can tell. It may not be difficult to define the impelling power of the flapping wing of sparrow or robin, but the force that impels the wonderful frigate bird with its steadily and constantly outstretched wings is simply miraculous.—Amateur Sportsman.

A Question of Accent.
Maurice Barrymore once made the rounds of the offices of the theatrical managers in London, trying to get them to put on a new play that Barrymore himself had written. One of the managers to whom Barrymore had read the play seemed much impressed. Before their interview had ended it had been decided to give the piece an early production and to have Barrymore "do" the leading role. About a week after what Barrymore had supposed was the definitely agreed upon arrangement had been reached the actor received a note from the manager asking him to call. When Barrymore responded to the summons the manager said:

"I like the play, old fellow, and I'm going to give it a fine production, but really I don't see how I can use you in the cast. Your beastly American accent won't do at all, you know. They don't like it here."

"That's odd," said Barrymore. "They tell me on the other side that I won't do on account of my beastly English accent."—Harper's Weekly.

A "Tramp" Geyser.
Everybody has heard of the famous geysers of the Yellowstone region, and many know their peculiarities. A guide was showing one of these geysers to a party of travelers.

"This," he said, "is what we call a 'tramp' geyser."

"Why 'tramp' geyser?" asked a member of the party.

"If you should offer it a cake of soap," he rejoined, with a grim smile, "you would find out."

The visitor followed the guide's suggestion and found the point of the joke in the violent ebullition which followed. It is a peculiarity of some of these geysers that throwing a cake of soap into them causes them to burst at once into a fit of ungovernable fury.

A Crowded Car Episode.
"My, but the cars are crowded!" "I should say so!"

"Why, last evening my car was so jammed that there wasn't foot room for all the passengers. Somebody stood on my left foot for ten minutes, and I got so tired of it I turned to the man next to me and said, 'Would you just as soon stand on my right foot instead of my left, for a change?' He looked down and replied: 'I beg your pardon, but you've made a mistake. I'm standing on this stout gentleman's foot, and besides, your right foot is occupied by the lady with the four parcels.'"

Women's Hair In Japan.
In Japan, "especially in the heart of the country, where foreign influence has never reached," quotes the Woman's Journal, there are women who wear their hair bobbed like a small boy's. This is a sign that they are widows and is done in respect for a Japanese custom of burying part of the wife's hair with the body of her husband. Often she cuts off just a little, not enough to spoil her pretty coiffure. But when she determines to remain forever true to his memory she cuts off all her hair and never again permits it to grow.

My Breath.

Shortness of Breath Is One of the Commonest Signs of Heart Disease.

Notwithstanding what many physicians say, heart disease can be cured. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure has permanently restored to health many thousands who had found no relief in the medicines (allopathic or homoeopathic) of regular practicing physicians.

It has proved itself unique in the history of medicine, by being so uniformly successful in curing those diseases.

Nearly always, one of the first signs of trouble is shortness of breath. Whether it comes as a result of walking or running up stairs, or of other exercises, if the heart is unable to meet this extra demand upon its pumping powers—there is something wrong with it.

The very best thing you can do, is to take Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. It will go to the foundation of the trouble, and make a permanent cure by strengthening and renewing the nerves.

"I know that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is a great remedy. For a number of years I suffered from shortness of breath, smothering spells, and pains in my left side. For months at a time I would be unable to lie on my left side, and if I lay flat on my back would nearly smother. A friend advised using Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which I did with good results. I began to improve at once, and after taking several bottles of the Heart Cure the pains in my side and other symptoms vanished. I am now entirely well. All those dreadful smothering spells are a thing of the past."—F. P. BRADY, Middletown, O.

On last Tuesday morning the residence of Ira Howard, Jr., on upper Quicksand, was completely destroyed by fire. It was just before day when his wife was awakened by the noise of the fire. The husband was not at home. The wife and two small children were the only inmates. It seems that some one had built a fire in a corner of the kitchen, which was within a few feet of the main building. Nearly all of the household goods were lost. One of the children came very near being burned. A good deal of excitement prevails. It is particularly sad, as the shoes and almost all the clothes of both wife and children were burned, leaving them in the cold and snow. No one yet has been arrested.

Ground Hog Chickens.

In the drug store of Browning & Harting, at Lexington, last Thursday, hundreds of persons called to see a ground hog with a brood of small chickens. The captive was placed in a cage of excelsior and dirt. He seems to be quite tame and fat. In October the ground hog refused to stir, and no amount of coaxing could arouse him. A few weeks ago six hen eggs were placed under the ground hog, and the day before yesterday six fine, little chickens were hatched. The chicks hopped out into the cage and pecked away at the ground hog's eyes, but still he did not move.

Thursday morning, shortly after 9 o'clock, the ground hog shook himself and walked about in his cage for a few minutes. The sun shown brightly and the room was warm. After viewing with curiosity his strange brood of fine chickens he laid down and has not since stirred.

KIT CARSON.

Some of the Famous Scout's Exploits as a Dispatch Bearer.

There was needed a messenger to the government at Washington. Who better could be than this iron framed rider, Kit Carson? He started on Sept. 15, 1846, and had won across the Rocky mountains when he met General Kearny's column and was ordered to return to California. In this return the Kearny column was assailed by the California Mexicans, stern fighters themselves, who pushed Kearny's forces into a desperate situation. The beleaguered troops needed a messenger out to San Diego. Kit Carson and Lieutenant Beale of the navy undertook the task. The hardships of the march wrecked the mind and body of Beale, who was an invalid for two years thereafter. It was nothing to Kit Carson. In March, 1847, he was started once more as a dispatch bearer to Washington. This time he met the Indians on the Gila, fought them, got through, crossed New Mexico, descended the Arkansas river and in the month of June arrived at Washington after having made 4,000 miles in three months' time. The journey requires little more than three days now, but we do not make it on horseback.

At Washington as some sort of reward for his services Carson was appointed lieutenant of the rifle corps of the United States army. His commission, however, was never ratified, though this he did not learn until some months later. He was sent back to California with dispatches. He crossed the Missouri river, fought the Comanches at the Point of Rocks and had won as far through as the Virgin river before he met his next Indian fight. He and fifteen companions here stood off 300 Indians. In time he reached Monterey and later, simply to keep himself in practice, took service against the Mexicans on the border for a time.

There was no man of all those known to the army officers who had the resources or was so well qualified as a dispatch rider as Kit Carson. He was sent back once more to Washington in the spring of 1848. The physical frame of any man except himself had been by these journeyings too far racked to enable him to make this long and hazardous trip. The souls of most men would have failed them long ere this. Yet this hardy, tough little man, just big enough for steady riding, cheerfully undertook this third journey across a continent as dispatch bearer.—Emerson Hough in Outing.

THE DEATH ROLL

Mrs. Howe, of Campton, died at her home last Tuesday, from injuries received from a fall several weeks ago. She was 84 years old and was loved and respected by all who knew her. She had been a member of the Baptist church for more than sixty years and lived a devoted Christian life. She raised a large family, most of whom still live in Wolfe county. She was known throughout Wolfe county as "Grannie Howe," and it is said that no one ever went away hungry from her door.

Big Revival Meeting.

Plans are being made by some of the leading church workers of Jackson for a big union revival meeting of all the churches, a similar meeting to the one now being held in Louisville, when all sectarian lines can be dropped and all Christian people work together for the salvation of our town. The meetings will probably be held in the court house or in a big tent if it can be secured.

It is proposed to hold the meetings about the middle of March or the first of April, or just as soon as the weather permits. All the churches of Jackson are asked to take a joint interest in and direction of this great forward move for one common good. Already one of the very best song directors in America, and one that all creeds can agree upon, has volunteered to assist in this great meeting. In behalf of the common good.

REV. W. W. POWELL.

Jackson Police Court Endorsed.

Just at this time when the eyes of the whole State, if not the entire country, are focused on Jackson, Breathitt county, which has been designated as the "feud capital," says the Lexington Leader, by reason of the lawlessness rampant up there it is refreshing to note that police court is held there and that this tribunal is doing what it can to rid the town of crime.

The recent issue of THE BREATHITT COUNTY NEWS, published at Jackson, publishes an official report of the Jackson police court, which shows that during the year 1904, 343 cases were tried by Police Court Judge T. P. Cardwell, Jr., and of this number there were 328 convictions and only 15 acquittals.

This shows that the officers of the town are trying to do their duty, and, as THE NEWS very appropriately remarks, they are entitled to great credit for the showing they have made in the face of discouraging conditions.

The rains Tuesday night and Wednesday made a tide in the river, which being full of ice, made a very destructive ice tide, the first in several years. The ice floe continued all day yesterday and thousands of logs went down which means a great loss.

WHEN MOTHER BLOWS THE HORN.

[Written for THE BREATHITT NEWS]

I remember very clearly
When we lived upon the farm,
When ma wanted us for dinner
She would always blow the horn.

I was always very anxious,
Listening for the horn to blow;
When it filled the air with music,
Down went shovel, and hoe.

Whether working on the hilltops,
Or if working at the barn,
I would always, always listen
For my ma to blow the horn.

When I'd go out in the new ground,
And my work was nearly done
I'd keep one eye on my mattock
And the other on the sun.

Or if pa'd commence to tell me
How to hoe the replant corn,
I'd keep one ear upturned to him
And the other tow'rd the horn.

When we went to hoe the lowlands
And my row would weedy be,
I'd look up and then downward,
Nothing but those weeds I'd see.

Once while hoeing these lowlands,
And the sun was shining high,
To myself I asked this question,
"Can I live or must I die?"

Or if plowing in the new ground,
I'd get kicked upon the thigh,
I would ask this same old question,
"Can I live or must I die?"

Things take on another aspect,
I hear mother blow the horn;
Now I feel so calm and peaceful
Like I'd live to judgement morn.

Now I'm longing for old Owsley,
To be there a-hoeing corn;
For I know my heart would flutter
When mother'd blow the horn.

M. O. P.'s Reorganize.

It is reliably reported that the M. O. P.'s, once a powerful and well represented secret organization, is again to be organized into full working capacity, but with not so large a membership as formerly. Ye writer is unable at present to outline the work of that organization, from the fact that we have not yet been admitted into its sacred (secret) precincts, and though its membership may be small, even so few as the "big four," yet they may say among themselves in the language of the philosopher, "The fewer the better share."

Three Negroes Get Death Sentence.

After deliberating three minutes, the jury in the John Taylor case at Lexington returned a verdict fixing his punishment at death, the jurors signing the verdict. The verdict in the John Taylor case brought an end to the three trials of the three negroes charged with the murder of William Moore in George Luigart's saloon on North Limestone street Sunday evening, November 20. The murder was one of the most unprovoked and cold blooded ever committed in Fayette county. No motive has been assigned for the crime except the fact of a general hatred of the white people in that saloon because of a cruel assault there shortly before the murder by a white man upon two negroes. The crime shocked the entire community but every protection of the law was thrown around those accused of the crime, and each was ably defended and each given an apparently fair trial. Ed Taylor was tried first and pleaded in his defense that he did not fire any of the shots. James Garfield Smith was tried next and pleaded an alibi. All three of the negroes were given the death sentence.

The Court of Appeals in an opinion by Judge O'Rear affirmed the Floyd circuit court in the case of John F. Butler vs. O. B. Stephens. The action was as to the validity of the act of 1904, creating the Thirty-first Judicial District, composed of Floyd, Knott and Magoffin counties. The appellant is commonwealth's attorney in the Twenty-fourth District, which contains Knott and Floyd counties, and which were in his district when elected. LORD KELVIN'S NAME.

The story of how the famous scientist, Sir William Thomson, assumed the name in the peerage by which he is now known all over the world is thus told by a journalist: "It was New Year's day when I called. The interview took place in his lordship's library in the corner building of the range of picturesque professional mansions on the eminence known as Gilmore Hill, around whose base winds a stream made classic in song. Lord Kelvin led me gently by the arm to a point from which the stream alluded to could be seen winding in beautiful curves through the grove called Kelvin. Pointing toward the river, his lordship, with quiet enthusiasm, remarked, 'I have lived and labored all my life on the banks of that stream, and why should I not call myself after it?'"

Weather Man Paid the Fine.

A group of young men, many of them officials in the government service, recently met in the smoking room of a Washington clubhouse. At the suggestion of one of the party it was agreed that the one first "talking shop" should be fined a dollar, but the evening passed and no fines had been imposed.

Mr. Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau, overcoat on and hat in hand, arose at last to go.

"Good evening," said he.

"Hold on, there! A dollar, please!" shouted several in unison.

Mr. Moore straightened back as though he had been hit a blow, looked puzzled, then grinned and, without a word, fished out the dollar.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Book Saved His Life.

"Moved by excitement," began General Joe Wheeler in relating one of his stories, "a young man determined to enlist. He accepted a Bible from his mother and as he placed it in his inside coat pocket promised to read the book every day.

"During one of the important battles this man's entire company was annihilated, but he escaped."

"Same old story," interjected a veteran—"bullet hit the Bible."

"No," continued the doughty little general, "the book saved his life, but not in the common and accepted way. The soldier was found seated behind a tree, keeping his promise to his mother."—Washington Post.

Your food must be properly digested and assimilated to be of any value to you. If your stomach is weak or diseased take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It digests what you eat and gives the stomach a rest, enabling it to recuperate, take on new life and grow strong again. Kodol cures sour stomach, gas, bloating, heart palpitation and all digestive disorders. L. A. Soper, of Little Rock, Ky., writes us: "We feel that Kodol Dyspepsia Cure deserves all the commendation that can be given it, as it saved the life of our little girl when she was three years old. She is now six and we have kept it for her constantly, but of course she only takes it now when anything disagrees with her." Sold by M. S. Crain.

Convincing Evidence.

Lawyer—Would you believe the sworn testimony of this man?
Witness—Certainly not, sir!
Lawyer—And why not?
Witness—Because, sir, that man hates to tell the truth. He always did. We were boys together, and he used to cry when the teacher made him say two and two made four.
Lawyer—Anything else?
Witness—Oh, yes. Once he was ill and described the symptoms so that the doctor prescribed for a sprained ankle when he was suffering from neuralgia in the head.
Lawyer—That will do. —Pearson's.

High Testimonial.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed little Alice, rushing in from school, "Ethel Talbot has got the loveliest mother that ever was! She is such a beautiful mother! I do wish you could see her!"

"Tell me about her, Alice," said her mother. "Why is she so lovely?"

"Why," said Alice, "she lets Ethel say 'By golly' all she wants to!" —Somerville Journal.

Suspicious.

Miss Lighted—I was very much admired at the wedding ceremony last night. I noticed one gentleman who never took his eyes off me the whole evening.

Miss Sharpe—Did the gentleman have a black mustache, waxed on the ends?

"Yes. Do you know him?"

"I know of him. He is a detective. He was there to watch the presents."

A Touching Story

is the saving from death of the baby girl of Geo. A. Eyer, Cumberland, Md. He writes: "At the age of 11 months, our little girl was in declining health, with serious Throat Trouble, and two physicians gave her up. We were almost in despair, when we resolved to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. The first bottle gave relief; after taking four bottles she was cured, and is now in perfect health." Never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. At the Jackson Drug Co. 50c and $1.00 guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

A Record of Marvelous Accomplishment.

Established February 19, 1904, The Kentucky Farmer and Breeder, of Lexington, has, within a few months' time, become concededly the best weekly paper of its kind in America, and has secured a paid-in-advance circulation of over 13,000 copies.

Among the contributors to its columns on agricultural topics are many of the best-posted men in America. Mr. H. F. Hillenmyer, whose reputation as a nurseryman is national, conducts each week a department of answers to inquiries, in which he gives from his vast store of knowledge, experience and study, his views and advice on any subject pertaining to the orchard, lawn or garden, about which information may be desired. Every issue of The Kentucky Farmer and Breeder contains the most pertinent news and the most timely advice for farmers and stock raisers of every sort.

As a medium for all forms of farm and live stock advertising (for both of which it offers special discounts), it has no rival in the state. More than half its circulation is in Kentucky, and for the most part among people who are interested in and able to buy either farms or good stock.

By special arrangement we are able to offer for a limited time

THE KENTUCKY FARMER AND BREEDER

AND

THE BREATHITT COUNTY NEWS

BOTH FOR 1 YEAR AT $2.00

THE PRICE OF THE KENTUCKY FARMER AND BREEDER ALONE.

It is the most valuable weekly paper in America for the farmers of Kentucky to take. Published at Lexington, "the hub of the horse world," and the center of the state's agricultural interests, it has the opportunity to obtain, and it never fails to publish live, up-to-date, fresh news and valuable feature matter which no other paper contains.

Sample copies may be had on application at this office.

Not a Business Matter.

"Why do you wish to learn jiu jitsu? I can't see where it'll help you in your business."
"It's on my wife's account. She's so fussy. Whenever our cook has a bean who stays later than 12 o'clock at night I have to go down to the kitchen and order him to leave." —Chicago Record-Herald.

A Victim of Habit.

A new member of the fire department in Chicago after a week's service reported to the chief that he desired to resign in order to return to his old occupation of stoker on a lake steamer.

"Why," exclaimed the chief, "I thought you were perfectly satisfied with your job. I am surprised that you should wish to go back to your old position, which pays you less money than this."

"Well, chief," was the reply, "it isn't because I'm not satisfied with the place, but I figure it out that I wasn't intended to be a fireman. Every time we go out to fight a blaze I feel a strong temptation to whoop her up instead of throwing water on her. Early training's too much for me, chief."

In a Bad Way.

A Washington county (Mo.) editor writes: "One of our newly married young ladies kneads bread with her gloves on. The editor of this paper needs bread with his shoes on. He needs it with his trousers on, and unless the delinquent readers of this old rag of freedom pay up soon we will need bread without a darn thing on!"

The Dutch on the Congo.

The Dutch are the most accomplished colonizers in the world. There exists no finer monument to their genius than is contained in their picturesque settlement in the French Congo. If there were no heads of departments in Europe, they would be the paramount race in central Africa today.—London Today.

Paper Boat.

In Vienna a paper boat, sixteen feet long, has been built out of the back numbers of a leading daily paper of that city. Hull, spars and sails have all been made from the pulped brains of the literary staff. Four hundred thousand copies of this journal will make a yacht—sails and all.

Public is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of the great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 548 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, O., writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at The Jackson Drug Co.; price 50c.

Ways of Shoeing a Horse.

Complaint is made that the horse-shoers of England are behind those of continental Europe and that the perfect way of shoeing a horse is yet to be discovered, although it seems that there are 115 ways of shoeing a horse as practiced in the different armies in Europe.

The chief carrier of the Fourteenth dragons of the French army, A. M. Grosset, spent nearly the whole of his spare time in obtaining specimens in order to constitute illustrations of these methods. When he died a short time ago he presented the whole of his collection to the French minister of war.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Cows' Horns and Milk.

There is no doubt that a cow yields more milk after the removal or suppression of her horns. This was proved by Neumann, who saw four Dutch cows without horns give from thirty-six to thirty-eight pints of milk a day on poor pastures, while some of the same breed, but with horns, gave only twenty-four or thirty pints on good grazing land. This curious fact has been confirmed by American breeders, who have tried similar experiments.—London Mail.

Beads and a Census.

The recent census of the natives in the Transvaal was taken with beads. Each head man was furnished with a number of beads of different colors and twine on which to string them. A big black bead represented an adult married native, a big yellow bead a grown up single man, a big blue bead a married woman and a white bead a single woman over fifteen years old. A small yellow bead stood for a boy and a small white bead for a girl.

The Difference Defined.

Leslie Mortier Shaw, secretary of the treasury, was at luncheon in the Hamilton club of Chicago. The talk had turned to statesmen and politicians, when John M. Harlan said, "Mr. Secretary, what is the difference between a statesman and a politician?" Quick as thought came the answer, "It's the difference between the young man seeking a position and the boy looking for a job."

The Sunshine of Spring.

The Salve that cures without a scar is DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Cuts, Burns, Boils, Bruises and Piles disappear before the use of this salve as snow before the sunshine of spring. Miss H. M. Middleton, Ticeles, Ill., says: "I was seriously afflicted with a fever sore that was very painful. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured me in less than a week." Get the genuine. Sold by M. S. Crain.
